

Between order and chaos, Detlef Aderhold's creative search

" Cacophony and silence, chaos and order, gentleness and ferocity. Within the paintings, the familiar and everyday are transformed into a completely new and mysterious "

Detlef Aderhold

The search for a form of individual expression, realizing the composition that in the tissue of matter seems impossible to achieve, has always been the driving force of artists. The work of D. E. Aderhold is an example of taming these efforts while exploring the pure line of the creative concept.

Detlef Aderhold is a German, experienced painter who is looking for his conceptual solutions between the visual clamor of abstraction and tranquil figurative motives.

Frim ambiguity in his paintings is a reflection of the connections between the emotional, spiritual, inner world and the reality that surrounds us in its raw form. Detlef Aderhold, however, is not limited to strict analysis and standard color clashes, moreover, he goes far further looking for the cleanest connections between what is so hard to achieve - harmony of chaos and order, and each painting is a separate search.

Thus, his works cannot be reduced to the standard category. Multilayered compositions have a strong emotional charge that does not result from the general concept of expression.

These paintings, at the same time, are referring to various impulses and aspects of creativity, evoke varied emotions in the observer, a multitude of associations, influence subconscious comparisons but also refer to our basic memories. These multiple functions of D. E. Aderhold's paintings draw the viewer into this ambiguous world, full of conceptual, emotional signals and impressions.
